

Q: What license is necessary to be self-employed as an electrician?

A: When contracting with the public and requesting permits, your business must be licensed as an electrical contractor. Each electrical contractor must employ at least one master electrician. Therefore, if you are a one-person electrical business, you must obtain both an electrical contractor license and a master electrician license.